

collections OOUGLAS Library

queen's university at kingston

KINGSTON ONTARIO CANADA

FROM PAPERS OF
W.C. BRIAN TUNSTALL,
LONDON SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS, THROUGH THE KINDNESS OF
DR. D.M. SCHURMAN, R.M.C.
APRIL, 1985

THE

BISHOP of SARUM'S

Thanksgiving Sermon,

December 31. 1706.

SERMO

Preach'd before the

UEE AND THE

Two Houses of Parliament,

St. P A U L's

On the 31st of December, 1706.

The Day of Thanksgiving

FOR THE

Wonderful Successes of this Year.

By the Right Reverend Father in God, GILBERT, Lord Bishop of Sarum.

Dinted by her Pajetty's Special Command.

 $L \cap N \cap O N$:

Printed by W. B. for A. and J. Churchill at the Black Swan in Pater-noster-Row. 1707.

•

PSALM lxxii. Verse 4.

He shall judge the Poor of the People, he shall defend the Children of the Needy and shall break in pieces the Oppressor.

Solomon, and contains many Prophecies relating to his glorious peaceable Reign: Most of these belong plainly to him, and were literally accomplished in him: But in some the Spirit of Prophecy pointed farther to the Messias. The Jewish Masters themselves think that Solomon is here set forth as a Type of the Messias, and that these Prophecies were to have a suller Accomplishment in a more August manner in Him.

The words that follow my Text can be no otherwise understood, They shall fear thee as long as the Sun and Moon endureth, throughout all Generations: So also these; His Name shall ver is endure for ever, his Name shall be continued as long as the Sun: Men shall be diessed in him, all Nations shall call him Blessed. The Rapture with which the Psalm concludes, is too high for any thing lower than this: Blessed be the Lord

Lord God of Israel, who only doth wondrous things: And bleffed be his glorious Name for ever, and let the whole Earth be filled with his Glory, Amen and Amen. So the Characters in which this King is fet forth, do not only agree to the Mosaical, but also to the Evangelical Dispensation. The Predictions in my Text contain the Description of a Christian Prince; if he makes the Messias his Pattern, he will conform his Government to this Standard of Prophecy concerning him.

We have here all that is great and good, all that is valuable or desirable in Government. Impartial Justice in the Administration at home; the generous Defence of such as are destitute of the Means of preserving themselves, and a steady pursuing the Oppressors of Mankind, till they are broken in pieces; utterly disabled to carry on their pernicious Designs. more copiously enlarged on in the following Ver. 12, 13, parts of the Pfalm. He shall deliver the Needy when he crieth, the Poor also and him that hath no Helper. He shall spare the Poor and Needy, and shall save the Souls of the Needy. He shall redeem their Soul (or Life) from Deceit and Violence, and precious shall their Blood be in his fight. Here is a noble Model, by which Princes ought to form themselves, and their People .

People ought to have the perfecter Joy in them, and the greater Confidence in their Conduct, the nearer they see them come to it. We have a Description of the Messias in the Visions of Isaiah, not unlike this in my Text. xi. Isaiah a With Righteousness shall be judge the Poor, and reprove with Equity for the Meek of the Earth. ---- And with the Breath of his Lips shall be Pay the Wicked. The Word rendred in our Translation Oppressor is by the Seventy and the Vulgar rendred the Sycophant or false Accuser, by the Syriack the Tyrant, and by the Arabick the Criminal. Every one of these Rendrings may be of use, to give us the compleat Idea of an Enemy to Mankind. Here we have a beautiful View of a glorious Government, I had almost said of our own. It is true, the Oppressor is not yet broke in Pieces, but if we are not wanting to our felves, and to that Conduct of Providence which we do now celebrate, we may hope, from the Advances already made, to see this finished in due time.

What a Curse has it been to Mankind, as well as it is an inverting the Ends of Government, that so few have copied after this great Original! Can it be supposed that any are set over others, but for the Good and Happiness

Happiness of their People, and the Sasety of their Neighbours? and that a due Ballance may be kept among them, fo that none of them may outgrow the rest, or have them too much at Mercy? Can any think that Princes are raifed up to that Exaltation of Glory and Dignity, only to gratifie their reftless Ambition, their boundless Desires, and their ravenous Projects? The Alexanders and the Cafars may be proposed as Patterns to those who are upon the false scent of Glory; but what a Plague has it been to the World, that those who would pass for God's Representatives, have chosen rather to carry on them the Characters of Abaddon and Appolluon to be the Devourers and Destroyers, rather than the Deliverers and Preservers of Mankind?

Alexander upon no Provocation invaded a great Empire, that was furfeited with Wealth, and enervated with Luxury. His Infolence grew with his Success, and became insupportable even to his Greeks. He was for some Years the Scourge of the Age; but tho' he defired to pass for an Immortal Man, and the Son of Jupiter, he did not long outlive his Return to Babylon, but was poysoned by his Captains, who shared his Spoils among them without any Regard to his Family.

Casar had a deeper management, and a greater Mind, but all was Craft and Perfidy. It is true a Conspiracy against his Country, its Laws and Liberty succeeded in his Hands, and upon his Advantages he govern'd himself with much Dexterity and great Art; but his Defigns appearing too foon and too evidently a Conspiracy against himself, was conducted with the same Success that his against his Country had been, and he fell a Victim to Treachery and Ambition. Those false Heross. who were as unhappy in the Conclusion, as they had been prosperous in the Progress of their Fortunes, have, as it were, bewitched the Men in Power and Authority, to follow their Examples and to tread in their Steps.

How long and how much has the World suffered by these Maxims? What havock have they made of Nations? and what Scenes of Fire and Blood have been acted by Men, who might have been publick Blessings, the Darlings of Mankind, and the Glories of human Race? How have they abused the Power trusted to them by God and Man for the good of the Community? They begin with their own People, they oppress and enslave them that they may be the sitter Instruments of their Cruelty, the more zealous to oppress and enflave others; hoping that by fuch Services, their own Miseries may become the less unsafy, and the more supportable to them. Princes who govern themselves by such Maxims do certainly render their own People miserable, but they are not so sure to succeed in their Designs on their Neighbours. They may at some time or other turn terribly upon them; for a Nation exhausted by a long tract of War, and dispirited by all the Contrivances of Oppression, will prove an unequal Match to a free and injured Neighbour.

.

enflave

Should they succeed and conquer! What is Conquest but a salse Glosse, put on the worst and blackest of Crimes, Injustice, Robbery, and Cruelty? It is scarce possible to imagine, how a Man can be guilty of a Sin more heimous in it self, of a more complicated Nature, and attended with more dismal Consequences, than to be the Author of an unlawful War. All the Violence that is done, all the Blood that is shed, with all the Train of Wickedness that follows War, is certainly to be charged on the unjust Aggressor. How heavy must that Load lie?

But what a bleffed Reverse to all this does appear in a Government framed and conducted by the Rules here set forth. A Sovereign posfessed with these Principles, has the Good of his People ever in his View. All his Councils and Designs are directed to promote this. He feels all their Happiness as his own. He thinks he has a Property in it all. He wisely fore-sees and guards against Dangers at the greatest distance. He bears a sensible Share of all the Troubles and Losses of his People. These raise in him tender Compassions, especially if they follow upon any Error of ill Conduct of his own.

This will give him a real Agony.

Panegyricks, Statues, or Triumphal Arches, are meanthings to Men of exalted Minds; they despise those Expressions of Slavery and Flattery; they feel a Joy of a nobler fort when they see their People happy, and when all acknowledge that it is procured to them by their Prince's means; of such it will be said without Flattery, for God has said it, Ye are God's.

These judge even the Poor of the People, they hold that Ballance even and steady; they assign for the deputed part of Judgment, Men fearing God, hating Gifts; and eschewing Coveton hols: In Cases that come under their own Eyes, and are reserved to their Decision, they do Justice without Respect of Persons, to the Poor as well as to the Rich. The meanness of the Person that praies it, recommends him to their Favour and Compation, so far are they from defpising or neglecting any because they are poor. The just Prince admits all easily, he hears them patiently, he weighs every thing calmly, and determines with such Integrity, that Justice slows from the Throne like a Stream, watering all with its Moisture, and rendring all Industry, and every good Design fruitful.

It is the peculiar Happiness of a well constituted Government that there are settled Boundaries, and established Checks to restrain and over-awe those on whom Corruption or Frailty might otherwise prevail too much. It is scarce possible for human Nature to keep within due Bounds, where the Power is without Controul. Some Princes may perhaps have Virtue so radicated in them, that how absolute soever their Authority may be, they will employ it all for the good of the Community: Yet this cannot last long, if it has no other Bottom but the Will and Pleasure of the Prince.

From Nerva's time down to Marcus Aurelius, the Roman Empire had for above fourscore Years the best Succession of Princes that we find in History; yet all the good that these did, was soon overturned by Commodus, in whom Arbitrary Power appeared in its natural Colours, Luxury and Cruelty.

Happy

Happy we! and yet more happy if we had a just sense of it! who live under a Government, well ballanced, and steadily managed; where Justice and Mercy meet together, and temper one another; where the poorest are not asraid to complain, and the greatest are not above the reach of Justice; where the course of Law is free, and the proper places for Redress are well known.

The Second Branch of the Character of a Prince conform to the Messias's Standard is, He shall defend the Children of the Needy, the doubly miserable, who are necessitous by entail: Neither they nor their Fathers are able to support them. If a Prince is in a helpless state, an Orphan feeble in himself, and forsaken of all; if his Dominions lie, exposed, and feem a convenient Acquisition; if the Conjuncture is favourable, and the Opposition is like to be inconsiderable, this will seem so inviting to those Beasts of Prey, the Conquerors, that they will imagine they have a right to all that others have not a force to maintain. Those Men of Rapine, the Wolves and Lions of our Race, do with an unrelenting and infatiable Fury, devour the Honest and Industrious, little practifed in the Arts of War, and less acquainted with the Methods of Invasions, who may think think they are fafe, because they know they are innocent.

These will be quickly swallowed up by them, if they are not within the reach of a just and merciful Prince; who thinks it not enough for him to make his own Country safe and happy, but looks on himself as bound by the Ties of Nature and Humanity, of Compassion to the Miserable, and Regard to the common Interests of Mankind, to vindicate an injured Neighbour, a broken Alliance, and a perfidious Invafion; to defend the Fatherless, and to rescue the Oppressed; to redeem their Lives from Deceit and Violence, and to shew his Horror at Blood unjustly shed.

It is true, War in general is contrary to the Spirit and the Design of the Christian Re-Rom. xii 4 ligion; yet the Magistrate would bear the Sword in vain, if he might not punish what is done abroad, against Treaties, against the Laws of Nations, and the Rights of his Neighbours and Allies, as well as the Crimes committed at home against his own Laws. Good and Safety even of his own People, being more concerned in the one than in the other. The robbing a Kingdom is more criminal in it telf, and of more mischievous Consequence than that on the High-way; which is Petty Larceny compared to the other. A single Murther is far short of a Commission given for Slaughter, and to execute whole Countries: A new Phrase, to which the Barbarity of sormer Ages did not rise up, but is well suited to modern Practices. War against such Hostility to Mankind, is in its Original and Nature still defensive.

How glorious is the Defence! when it is undertaken with a pure regard to Justice, and to the preserving a due Ballance; without any pretence to Conquest, or even to Cautionary Towns, for refunding a vast Treasure, laid out in the Defence of helpless Neighbours, far above what they can repay, tho' they should mortgage themselves for their Ransom.

When Abraham went to rescue captiv'd Kings, Gen. xiv. 14-to recover the Spoil, and deliver the Prisoners, to the end. and succeeded in the Attempt, he took care of his Allies who had ventured with him, and he abated for the Subsistence of his Men; but as to his own part, when the rescued Kings out of a just Gratitude, put every thing in his Power, he restored all to them, even to the smallest matter, with this heroical Expression, they should not say They had made Abraham rich.

ries of this Nation, that we saw one great War ended ended without any Demand for Repayment, or the least View of Interest, Ambition, or any other Advantage whatfoever, besides the Safety procured to us at Home, and the Security given to those Abroad.

This is the true Sublime of Generolity, when those who are rescued from Tyranny and Oppression, feel that they have not only changed Masters; but that they have passed from Slavery to Liberty, and from Violence and Rapine to Ease and Quiet. How these Measures of Government are purfued in the prefent Administration, needs not be opened or enlarged on; the thing it self speaks, all see and feel it.

The Third Branch of the Prophecy, in which the nature of the Messias's Kingdom is foretold, is, He shall break in pieces the Oppressor, the Tyrant, the false Accuser, and the Criminal. Every one of these Rendrings carries in it somewhat that is so odious, that the Conjunction of themall in one, must give Ideas full of Horror. We need not run far in viewing the present State of the World, before we shall find such certain Indications, as cannot mislead us in fixing this Character.

A fure one is, if a Prince has given full Scope to Pride and Insolence, has encouraged all the Excesses of Flattery, has suffered himself to be called of Glory, with many other blasphemous Indecencies practis'd of late, beyond any thing that we find done since the Days of Caligula or Heliogabalus.

25

If this Prince has broke thro' all the Liberties of his People, debased all their Judicatories, invaded all their Properties, and subjected every thing to his own Will and Pleasure.

If he has violated all that was most sacred in Government, in the face of irrevocable Edicts, secured by his Coronation Oath, confirmed by many folemn Promises, joined with Acknowledgments of great Services, done by those of his Subjects, against whom nothing but the Matters of their God was ever pretended: If he has let loose all his Fury upon these, condemned them to Dungeons and to Gallies, to the Fire and to the Wheel, only because they could not yield to a barbarous Force, and in spite of Conviction and Conscience turn to the King's Religion; which was the Argument chiefly urged by the Missionaries of that Cruelty, the Dragoons. Of this I may speak with the more Assurance, having been an Eye-witness of those Scenes of Horror. If we know to whom all this belongs, we have one full view of an Oppressor: If we will look at him in another Light, we will find him out by an Age of Wars, which were all unjust and perfidious in their Original, as well as inhumane and cruel in their Progress.

A General Peace seemed to put an end to War; upon that a Marriage was made, and an Oath was taken, renouncing all Claim of Succession by it; yet that was broke thro' upon a seigned pretence of the Preserence due to the Females of the first Marriage. The Invasion began at the same time that the Designs of it were solemnly denied at the Court chiefly concerned. Here was the first War: Conquests were easily made, where a seeble Orphan could make no Resistance.

The Alarm that this gave awaken'd all the World; we feemed to feel it, and in Conjunction with the States most concerned, put a stop to a farther Progress. All that was demanded by him being yielded, a new Peace was concluded. Soon after that, a Project was laid against the States, who had given no other Provocation, but because they had taken care to secure themselves by preserving a Barrier. No Colour could be found to justifie an Invasion, against the Faith of many Treaties and a long Alliance. The Glory of the Prince was all that was pretended.

Upon this the second War broke out with such a Torrent, that if the Conduct had answered the sirst Successes, those Blessed Provinces must have become a Prey. God raised up indeed a mighty Deliverer, who rescued them out of the Paw of the Lion.

Upon

Upon a change in the face of Affairs a new Treaty was opened; but so managed, that it was visible it was intended only to dissolve a great Alliance; and to lay the Allies asleep: fraudulent Pra-Etices were but too successful. Peace was again made, but Hostilities went on still. In sull Peace two of the most important Places, that secured Strasthe Empire and the States were taken; and at Luxenthe same time an infamous course of Forgery bourg. and Violence was set on foot on the pretence of Dependencies and Re-unions. The Empire being uneasse at these Infractions, was threatned with a new War, unless they would confirm those unjust Acquisitions. That great Body was not then in condition to resist such an Invasion, so they agreed to confirm all by a Truce, for a term of Years, which is a full Peace during the Term. This procured them only a short, as well as a false Interval of Quiet.

A third War was begun without the least Colour of a Breach on their side: Nothing was pretended besides the unaccountable Apprehensions of a War, designed by one of the weakest Princes of the Empire. Here we may view the Oppressor in a clearer Light, that was more visible and sensible to us, by the great Share we bore in that long and devouring War.

When the Impatience of some, and perhaps the worse Designs of others, made a farther Progress uneasie: Then a fourth Peace was concluded. At the same time the Emissaries of the false Accuser were every where at work: Jealousies were infused, Distractions were raised; and these had fatal Effects in more places than one: All disarmed again, while the Oppressor, who saw what was approaching, kept up a mighty Force. In our weakned and disjointed State, our Great Deliverer thought, that of two Evils the least was to be chosen. So a Treaty was made, with a particular Provision, that no Will nor Testament in opposition to it should be accepted. This was no sooner agreed to than Practices were set on foot, to procure such a Will, true or forged, which was no fooner published and offered than it was accepted; and that was coloured with an Excuse that aggravates the Perfidy. That the Spirit of the Treaty was considered preferably to the Letter or Words of it. Framed no doubt by a Society well practifed in fuch Difguises.

When all this Deduction of four great destructive Wars, begun with so much Injustice, and five deceitful Treaties all persidiously broken; when, I say, all this is laid together, we see very evidently, to whom the Character of an Oppressor, with all the other various Rendrings of the Word, do manifestly agree. If all the particular Instances of every Breach of Articles, Capitulations, and Cartels were to be brought in to the Account, it would swell yet to a far greater Bulk.

It remains next to be considered what is meant by the breaking the Oppressor in pieces: Less certainly cannot be meant, than the disabling him to persist and go on in his Oppression; and not to give him that Respite and those Intervals, that by long and dear Experience, we may know, he only desires, that he may recover himself, and recruit his Forces, and then return to his former Practices, as soon as a false Peace may put him in condition to prosecute them, and to take severe Revenges for what's past.

There is no Peace, saith God, to the Wicked: Issuin 21. Till what is perfidiously seised on is restored, till the Exiles are recalled, the Prisoners are set at Liberty, till the Edicts that were their Inheritance are revived, and Compensation is made for the precious Blood that has been shed among them, till the Oppressor is so bounded, that his own People are secured from Oppression, and his Neighbours from Invasion; till this is done, it is reasonable to hope that Man will say as God has said, There is no Peace to the wicked.

There is a memorable Passage in the History of the Kings of Israel that deserves our Attention. When Benhadad King of Syria had invaded Ahab at the same Rate of Justice and Decency, that has been observed by the modern Oppressor, the first Declaration of War being in these Words, Thy Silver and thy Gold is mine, I will fend my Servants who shall search and take away what soever is pleasant in their Eyes. That King, tho' the worst of all that reigned over those Tribes, being thus attackt, had as a Prophet promised him, in the Name of God, in two succeeding Years two entire Victories; or to speak in our own Stile a Hochstet and a Ramillies; and a great part of the V. 22,21. Syrian Army perished under the Walls of Aphek, a Town we may imagine not unlike Turin. The proud Invader was so broken with these Losses, that he beg'd not only Peace, but his Life, in a very abject manner, calling himself his Serwant Benhadad. Ahab, by an ill-timed Generosity, 1. 32. accepted his Submissions, and believed his Promises. He treated him as a Brother, and a Peace was foon concluded: All he could ask was granted. Upon this a Prophet was sent to him with this severe Message, Thus saith the Lord, because thou 17. 42. hast let go out of thy Hand, a Man whom I appointed to utter Destruction, therefore thy Life shall go for his Life, and thy People for his People. The Arricles of Peace were not kept, nor were the Towns restored. And when Abab went to possess himself of one of them, he was killed in Battel, and the Syrians Syrians had a full Revenge in the following Reign; as was foretold by Elisha, They burnt I Kings the strong Holds of Israel, they slew their young Men, 2 Kings they dashed their Children, and ript up their viii. 12. I Kings Women with Child. The Kings of Israel had xx. 2. 31. the Reputation of being merciful Kings, and perhaps their People were uneasse by Reason of the War; but they soon felt, and that very sensibly, the Essects of an undue Compassion, of an unreasonable Considence, and of a hasty and ill-secured Peace.

3.

These things are written for our Example: It is to be hoped, that none will think the Work is done, till Justice is done to Mankind, and till the Oppressor is put out of a Capacity to return to be any longer the Plague of the World, as he has been for near half a Century, more than Famines, Earthquakes, and Pestilence.

We do now all see, and feel the Essects of that Haste with which we run formerly into a precipitated Peace, and put an undue Considence in a Faith that was so little to be depended on. We see what Advantages this gave, and the mistrust that it created at home, which has brought us under an uneasse Aster-Game; and we may justly apprehend more fatal Essects if we shall fall again into the like Error, the last would be worse than the first.

It is true, Peace is a Word of an agrecable found, it strikes and has Charms in it. God forbid, that any who carry the Name of a Christian, should resolve against all Terms of Peace whatsoever. It would ill become a Minister of the Prince of Peace to sound the Trumpet of War; but a salse delusory Peace, a Peace in which any Considence is put in a Faith so often and so impudently broken, a Peace that may lay us open to new Wars, and may involve us in new Dangers; such a Peace is certainly an Opiat that may give a present Quiet, but that will have a terrible awakening, if it does not make us sleep The Sleep of Death.

There is a Mercy that is cruel, not only to the rest of Mankind, but even to those who are the Objects of it; and a just Severity may be a Blessing, not only to rest of the World, but even to those on whom it falls heaviest. It may bring them to such Reslections on themselves, as may render them capable of that Mercy which they do so much need; and it may put them out of a Capacity of encreasing their Guilt, or of enhansing their Punishment, which must come on them heavily somewhere, here or hereaster.

And whyshould any desire to stop the Progress of the Glory of a Triumphant Reign? that has every Year shined out, in a Course of wise Counsels, and great Designs happily executed: But beyond all

all Example in this Marvellous, Marvellous Year: which has been a continued Chain of Prodigies. It did begin with a Face black enough to have intimidated Persons less brave, than those who encountred it.

In several Places Matters ran very near the last Extremities, and were brought to the Edge of the Precipice. That seemed to be ordered by a special Direction, that the Interpositions of Providence might appear more signally, when they were reserved to the critical Minute. On the side of the Oppressor they were so assured of Victory, that they departed from their usual Methods, and ventured on the Decision of one Great Day. That ended gloriously in a compleat Victory, and added new Lawrels to our samed General, and new and most important Acquisitions, by his Conduct, to our Allies, and a new Scene of Glory to our Renowned Queen.

Victory alone is a thing bright and full of Lustre: but what Words can fully set forth the recovering great Provinces, and the taking strong Places almost in as sew Days as they cost Years formerly? Towns well fortified and well surnished held us not so many Days, as our Enemies lost Weeks in the Siege that ended so satally to them; and all this with such inconsiderable Loss on our side, that it scarce deserves to be brought into the Account.

It is true we run one great Risk; which might have changed an entire Victory into a total Defeat: So much is one Man of more value than many thousands. The happy Rescue that came so seasonably, gives us reason to conclude, that a Life of such Importance to us all, is under the watchful Guard of Providence.

The Bleffed Reverse of those promising Appearances, and Hopes with which our Enemies flattered themselves in the beginning of the Year, the great Progress made in it, and the Glorious Conclusion of it, may be well looked on as Pledges that Heaven is on our side. That God goes forth with our Armies, and fights our Battels, that he defends the Cities of our Allies, and defeats the Designs of our Enemies, and that he is pouring Contempt on some Princes, while he is crowning Ours with Glory and Honour. An Ardour of Courage spread thro' the Armies of one side, while a dispirited Feebleness runs thro' the other, has been always looked on as the particular Work of Providence: From this we may give our selves just Hopes that the next Year shall prove yet more prosperous, than even this has Happy Providences alone are no Arguments; but when they are signal and surprising, on the fide of a just and righteous Cause, we may more certainly rely on them, and may draw draw favourable Inferences from them, in our Hopes of what is yet to come.

The long and great Prosperity of the Oppressor, was one of the dark Riddles of Providence, which was no doubt a stumbling to many who saw it, but more to those who suffered by it. God is now decyphering this to us. We do now see, that how well soever that formidable Greatness seemed to be established, yet to speak in the words of the next Psalm, it was set in slippery places, so that all may now cry out, How are Psalm, they brought into Desolation as in a moment, how 18, 19. are they utterly consumed with Terrors?

In God let us put our Trust, and in him let us rejoice: He has shewed Strength with his Arm, and S. Lukei. has scattered the Proud in the Imagination of their Hearts. He has often delivered us, and we may depend on it, he will still deliver us, if we do not by our Insensibility and Ingratitude, by our Factions and Murmurings, as well as by our other Sins, defeat the Designs of Providence, and render our selves unworthy, and indeed incapable of enjoying and improving these amazing Blessings, that are the Wonder of the whole World.

This Nation seems to be the peculiar Caré of Providence: What signal Blessings have followed us ever since the Reformation was first settled among us? What surprising Discoveries, as well as Deliverances, have happened ever fince the last glorious Revolution? And what an astonishing Progress of Success and Victory do we see in the present Reign?

What may not yet be expected from a Queen that offers up the Praise of all the Wonders of her Reign to that GOD under whose Protection she humbly puts her felf, and whom she so solemnly and conftantly worships? Who seems to have no other relish of the Greatness of Power, but as it puts her in a Capacity of doing much Good Abroad as well as at Home. Her Reign has been hitherto one continu'd Flood of Prosperity, without any Ebb, or Mixture of Misfortunes. We see in it likewise a course of noble Projects, for the Good and the Happinels of Her People, well begun, and steadily carried on. Her first Care was to rescue her Clergy from Poverty, and its Consequences, Ignorance and Contempt. With what Zeal has she for some Years pursued the Designs of Uniting Her Kingdoms into one Body, as well as all Her Subjects into one Mind? Oh when shall both be happily effected!

Late Posterity will feel the Effects of this; and will acknowledge that these great Blessings seem to be Felicities reserved by Heaven to make Her Reign as much more glorious, than that even of the celebrated Queen of the last Age, as that was beyond any thing either in our own History, or in any other whatsoever. May it but exceed it as much in its Length as it does surpass it in Glory!

What may we not expect, I say, from a QUEEN, who is the Delight and Admiration of all Her Subjects: under whom the Honour of the Nation is raifed beyond all that ever went before -Her? And Who is fo confrantly, as well as cheerfully supplied, and now beyond the Example even of our best Times, by that GREAT Body, who by their Zeal and Duty to Her, prove themselves to be the true Representatives of Her People: Who is also possessed of the profoundest Respect and Veneration from that ILLUSTRIOUS BODY, that receives the greatest Communication of Honour from the Crown. No Succession of it, in any Age, paid a persecter Return of Duty than they now do to the HEAD that carries it with so particular and so awful a Lustre. The Harmony within these Bodies, and between them, is not only a hopeful Augury, -but is the real Support and Strength of the Throne.

Under such a Direction, and with such an Assistance, what may we not look for from a General that has the happy Mixture of the greatest Arts, or rather a Nature, and Genius of the superior Superior to all Art; by which he has procured to himself, both an entire Credit with those over whom he has no Authority, and the Universal Love of those whom Her Majosty has put under His Command. He leads them out to Victory, he exercises them in glorious Fatigues and Conquests, and when he has lodged them in safe Quarters, he comes over to us, and lets us see that all the new Accessions of Glory cannot alter that beautiful Modesty that makes every thing else shine the brighter. And as he offered up the Praises of all his Successes to God, in many repeated Solemnities of Devotion, so he seems scarce willing to take that share of them to himself that is so justly due to Him.

Under such a Head, with the noble Train of gallant Officers, and a brave well disciplin'd Army, we may still humbly hope for a Continuance of Victory and Success. Nor have we less Reason to promise our selves every thing that is great, from our floating Castles, while they are under such Conduct, and so well commanded. Especially since the Nerves and Sinews of all are so well supplied, by a prudent Management, and an entire Credit at Home.

Our nearest and surest ALLIES, do bear their Share, how heavy soever, with so much Patience, in so close a Conjunction with us, and so absolute absolute a Confidence in our General, that Practices, which at other times have had a fatal Influence, are now visibly ineffectual.

These Princes that are united with us in the same Concerns of Religion, and are joyned to the Crown in the greatest nearness both of Blood and Interest, have been hitherto so true to us, and to themselves, that the present State of Asfairs in those Parts, gives us Cause rather to expect a new Accession of Strength from thence, than to apprehend any Diminution.

That Heroical Prince, who deserves so well his Rank among Crowned Heads, who has fo eminently distinguished himself beyond all Example (to remember the Words of our Sovereign) who put all to hazard, and was very near being reduced to the same ill State, to which we see some of the Instruments of the Great Oppressor are brought; He who with a Noble Branch of his own Royal House, has ventured and suffered fo much, and now fo gloriously recovered all; He, I say, who adhered so firmly to us in the last Extremities, cannot in this happy reverse of his Affairs, be capable of forgetting the Hand that faved him, nor the Nation that furnished out the Army, with which he now Triumphs and Conquers.

These are the best Grounds on which any human Confidence can rest: Our Hopes are on a Ps. exliviturer bottom; we trust in the Living God who Ps. existing Victory to Kings. The Queen does rejoyce 1,6,7,8,9 in thy Strength, O Lord, and we trust she shall yet have Cause to rejoyce greatly in thy Salvation. Thou hast already made Her exceeding glad with thy Favour. She still trusteth in the Lord, therefore we hope that thro' the Mercy of the Most High she shall not be moved, but that Her Hand shall find out all her Enemies, that the Lord shall swallow them up in his Wrath, and that the Fire shall devour them.

May we all learn from Her Example to ConSam.xii. fider how great things God has done for us, that we may fear the Lord, and serve him in Truth with our whole Heart. Let us again renew our solemn Vows in the humblest and sincerest manner, that when God shall deliver us from our Enemies and the Hand of them that hate us, we will serve him in Holiness and Righteousness all the Days of our Life. Let us conclude all as the Psalm ends, Blessed be the Lord God, who only doth wondrous things; and blessed be his glorious Name for ever,

FINIS.

and let the whole Earth be filled with his Glory.

Amen and Amen.

andialis

			10		